[illegible] session the senate adjourned.

[illegible]SIONAL CHIT-CHAT.

[illegible] LEGISLATION.

[illegible]—[Special.]—The senate on [illegible] passed the bill increasing the salaries [illegible] district judges to $5000 per year. [illegible] an amendment offered by [illegible] forbidding circuit and district [illegible] appointing relatives to office under [illegible]. [illegible] discussion Senator Miller of [illegible] of the other republicans wanted [illegible] changed so as not to be retroactive [illegible] adopted to the one relatives to the [illegible] and in this shape passed. [illegible] judges were accordingly denounced [illegible] Senator Ingalls declared that he [illegible] law making nepotism a mis[illegible] all government officials. The sun[illegible] committee on expenditure [illegible] justice has taken the same [illegible] besides changing the present sys[illegible] United States Marshals, district at[illegible] and clerks to regular sal[illegible] a bill [illegible] nepotism in all [illegible] this committee will incorporate [illegible] sundry civil appropriations bill. [illegible] The senate bill is not [illegible] unless it is grafted on the same [illegible] however, is not likely to be done.

[illegible] BILLS DOOMED.

[illegible] March 31.—[Special.]—It is pro[illegible] legislation looking to the ad[illegible] states from the north[illegible] congress is doomed. [illegible] Harrison of the committee on [illegible] to have a day set for consider[illegible] Dakota, when, to every [illegible] the democrats drew the party lines, [illegible] except Garland and Jones of [illegible]. This was hardly expected [illegible] Dakota has been stripped of [illegible] including a provision that [illegible] new state to vote at the pres[illegible] year. The democrats, however, [illegible] that Dakota would, if admitted, [illegible] senators to congress, and for [illegible] opposed it. The vote, 33 to 24, shows [illegible] further agitation. Almost the [illegible] of the bill admitting Wash[illegible] admitting a part of that [illegible] under the name of Tacoma, [illegible] the measure of Harrison [illegible] the senate will ever be re[illegible] committee.

[illegible] OF DOLPH'S BILL.

[illegible] March 31.—[Special.]—On Friday the [illegible] introduced by Dolph amending [illegible] so as to authorize the unloading [illegible] and other articles of like bulk [illegible] of customs officers, at the [illegible] interested at a place to be des[illegible] secretary of the treasury. This bill, [illegible] by Secretary Folger, is designed [illegible] landing of bulky merchandise at the [illegible] San Francisco bay, which, under the [illegible] has been done also to allow like [illegible] unloaded on the eastern side of [illegible] Portland harbor. These two [illegible] by Dolph and as others sug[illegible] the bill was amended to apply [illegible] and so passed. [illegible]

SARGENT'S RESIGNATION.

It Continues to be the Leading Topic in Diplomatic Circles

WASHINGTON, March 31.—[Special.]—The appointment of Minister Sargent to St. Petersburg and his subsequent declination and final resignation of the German mission, on the ground of ill health, has been the leading topic in diplomatic circles this week. Beyond doubt the state department in transferring Sargent, intended to snub Germany, by leaving the American mission in charge of the secretary of the legation for a while, but how Frelinghuysen could have so miscalculated Sargent's disposition is a mystery not yet explained. The Russian mission was not a promotion for Sargent. Its salary was the same, but Russia ranks last among the first class foreign missions of Great Britain, France, Germany and Russia, and St. Petersburg is the least desirable place to live. It is stated here by those familiar with diplomatic life in Berlin and St. Petersburg that no man appointed once to the former place would accept afterwards an appointment to the latter. President Arthur and his secretary of state must have known this, and may have transferred Sargent in order to give him a favorable opportunity to resign.

It is said here that besides his zeal for his country on the pork question, not the least part of Sargent's trouble at Berlin has arisen from his indifference to the etiquette of the German court. In other words, Sargent has been democratic and unpretentious in his social life, and has not remained up at night doing honor to royal festivals. This has made him unpopular with the governing class, and with his zeal to do his duty has caused the trouble. He is probably now glad to end it with his resignation.

A GERMAN JOURNALIST INTERVIEWED.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—Ottendorfer, proprietor of the Staats Zeitung, being interviewed, while declining to say anything concerning the general opinion held by his countrymen in this city, said that personally he looked upon the transfer of Sargent to the Russian ministry in the light of a promotion. Referring to the Lasker resolutions, Ottendorfer said: "The transmission of them was a mistake on the part of the secretary of state, and that Sargent's action in the matter was solely the performance of a duty assigned. At the same time Sargent's position now in Berlin is very disagreeable, and perhaps it may be with a view to relieving him of that situation that the secretary removes him to St. Petersburg. Insults have been heaped upon him by the semi-official press throughout Germany. The various little principalities [illegible] and provinces throughout Germany have their own local semi-official organs, the utterances of which are published at the dictation of parties in Berlin. I have been in personal receipt of many of those papers, and in many of them I found articles extremely malignant and vituperative against Sargent.

THE ARTICLES INSPIRED.

A remarkable feature about those articles is that their phraseology is almost identical, showing that they emanate from one head, and I believe that head is in control of what is known as the reptile fund located in Berlin. These official organs, for such they are, are supported by the fund, and are carried on with a view of educating the people in loyalty. With such a state of affairs Sargent's position is far from an enviable one in Germany. Although he does not, by any means, possess the ability of his predecessor, he is a gentleman, and perhaps it is with a view to avoiding his getting involved in another difficulty that he begs to be allowed to come home."

SARGENT'S UNENVIABLE POSITION.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The Star's Washington special says: Sargent wrote a letter to Hatzfeld, German secretary of state for foreign affairs, long before the Lasker incident, for which he was gently reprimanded by Frelinghuysen. Now Sargent had not interfered in the internal affairs of Germany. He had barely suggested that if the commission of German experts proposed by our government was refused and the order of prohibition was not modified, protective steps might be taken on our side. Frelinghuysen's rebuke made the more stinging by the mode of its delivery, and by young Von Hatzfeld's announcement that he already knew that Minister Sargent had been discredited at Washington, necessarily left Sargent without support in Berlin. He was dishonored at home and insulted abroad. No wonder Bismarck snubbed him at the first opportunity. The wonder is that Sargent did not throw up his commission at the time, rather than carry with his own hands to the imperial secretary for foreign affairs the official reprimand which Frelinghuysen had administered.

JUST IN TIME.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The Journal says: Aaron A. Sargent will arrive home in time from Berlin for a lively presidential boom. He would have the German vote certain.

BLAIR'S EDUCATION BILL.

It will Probably be Passed by the Senate this Week.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—[Special.]—For five days last week the senate was engaged in discussing the Blair educational bill. All the leading senators have made long speeches, and an adjournment was had Friday night with no vote being reached. The discussion has taken much bitterness, and sectional debate between the radical republicans and the southern democrats, but the efforts of the former to draw the party lines have so far failed.

The bill appropriates $15,000,000 the first year, $14,000,000 the second, and so on, decreasing each year the amount to be distributed among the states on the basis of illiteracy. Various restrictions are thrown around the use of the money, one provision enacting that no state shall receive a proportion unless during the first five years it shall itself raise and expend at least one-third as much as it is entitled to under the act.

Of course a large part of the money will go to educate the negroes of the south, and it was this fact which drew out the sectional debate referred to. Senator Sherman exhibited his intense prejudices by stating that he was unwilling to trust southern state governments to distribute money for education, and several moss-backed Bourbons of the south, notably Maxey of Texas, protested against being compelled to receive the money because the bill was unconstitutional. Southern senators who believe the party which liberated the slave should help educate them, and who are anxious to pass the bill, are severe in their comments on these men.

It is probable the measure will pass this week. Senator Blair says it is certain ultimately to pass, but he fears an effort will be made to postpone it this week.

THE WHISKY MEN'S DEFEAT.

They are Completely Demoralized by the Large Majority Against Them.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—[Special.]—The crushing defeat suffered by the advocates of the bill to extend the bonded period on whisky Thursday last has demoralized several distillers in congress. The majority of eighty-two against them was fully fifty greater than the whisky men expected, under the most unpropitious circumstances. They say the result was due to popular clamor and prejudice against whisky. Mr. Randall says he does not regard it as a victory for himself, and he only regrets that so many of his personal friends are involved in the mortification of the defeat. [illegible] the whisky [illegible] has softened the ideas of many members on the question of abolishing internal revenue taxes. [illegible] to listen to inter[illegible].

A NEW SCHEME.

Hewitt's speech, in which he favored taking the duty entirely off all raw material, including whisky, has started the members of the lower house to discussing another branch of tariff reform. The whisky men, however, have no intention of giving up what is known as the Thompson bill, which provides for the consolidation of internal revenue and customs collection districts and incidentally remodels the internal revenue bureau by abolishing some of the offices. It will now be pushed in the committee and brought before the house. This bill has a provision providing that the tax on bonded spirits is to be paid when they are withdrawn from warehouse, thus indirectly extending the period as proposed in the bill just defeated. With a majority against them, however, very few of the whisky men entertain a hope that this bill can pass.

CHINESE BILLS.

Poor Prospects for the Passage of Either Measure this Session.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—[Special.]—Senator Miller's Chinese bill came up in the senate Thursday during the morning hour, and upon an objection offered by Wilson of Iowa was placed upon the calendar. The rule limiting speeches to five minutes prevails during the morning hour of the senate, and Wilson based his objection on the fact that the bill was too important to be discussed under such restrictions. In the place assigned it on the regular calendar the bill, besides being behind all appropriation bills, has several important measures ahead of it. A month will probably elapse before it can be reached.

The house Chinese bill, which is in charge of Mr. Lamb of Indiana, may be taken up in some shape a week from today. Two weeks ago a call of committees to suspend the rules, the committee on foreign affairs was not reached. Hence Mr. Lamb was unable to move a day for consideration, as he intended. Another call of committees does not occur until the third Monday in April, by which time the tariff debate will be under full headway. Lamb has promised California members that he will a week from to-day move to pass the bill when members are recognized to suspend the rules, and he has placed his name on Speaker Carlisle's list for that purpose. There are so many members ahead of him, however, that it is not likely his name will be reached. The only chance for the bill therefore appears to be on the third Monday in April, and in all probability on that day it will be crowded out by the tariff. The prospects for [illegible] legislation this session, therefore, are very [illegible].

EASTERN DISPATCHES.

The Cincinnati Riot Checked—the Mob Retiring from the Scene.

PRESS COMMENT UPON THE MOB'S ACTION

Belford of Colorado Tells how Garfield was Prejudiced Against the Stalwarts—A "Bear" Day in Wall Street—Notes

CINCINNATI, March 31.—Everything is quiet this morning. But very few people are about the court house, and they from curiosity. The barricades are still in position around the jail, but will probably be removed to-day. A feeling that the trouble is over pervades the whole city.

At midday there is no appearance of relaxation of preparations for defense. The barricades of barrels and every other sort of material still remain across all the avenues approaching the county buildings, and beyond them stand the militia with guns and fixed bayonets everywhere bristling. The police have been sent away to their regular posts and are obtaining some rest. Though the general feeling is that there will be no further outbreak, there is no lacking of men who predict otherwise.

THE CITIZENS' COMMITTEE MEETING.

At a meeting of the citizens' committee appointed by the mayor, resolutions were adopted thanking the governor and the Ohio national guard for the efficient aid rendered the civil authorities, pledging support to the mayor in the course he has adopted, and promising to furnish additional means if, in the opinion of the mayor, an additional force is necessary. Resolutions were also adopted appointing a sub-committee to provide rooms for the use of the courts, and recommending that the court of common pleas proceed at once to dispose of criminal cases. The mayor was requested to select an executive committee of fifteen from the members of this meeting for advice and counsel, to whom all matters should be referred.

RANDOM SHOTS.

Reports have been received that a shot fired this morning by the militia entered the second intermediate school house, on Ninth street, between Main and Walnut, also that two men were shot, but this is not verified.

It has been ascertained with great satisfaction that nearly the entire set of records in the recorder's office, containing records, deeds, mortgages, etc., are saved. A person familiar with the office says not more than fifty volumes of records are gone, covering transactions of about three years of the city's history years ago. This will be of immense value, considering what else is lost. It is supposed that the money in the treasury vaults and the records in the probate judge's vault are safe, but the safes cannot yet be opened.

The physician attending Bridge Swift says his condition is much improved, though his advanced age, 73 years, makes the chances of recovery less. Mr. Swift, with Henry Hanna, was walking up Main toward the court house, and when at the southeast corner of Ninth and Main the militia ordered them to halt. They obeyed [illegible] lately, but afterwards a gun was discharged in front of them and both fell. Mr. Swift was shot through the thigh of the left leg; in his fall he took Mr. Hanna with him, who fainted from excitement.

TROOPS ORDERED HOME.

COLUMBUS, March 31.—Advices from Cincinnati state that [illegible] Governor Hoadly ordered troops en route to return. The Fourth and Fifth [illegible] regiments will be relieved and the rest of the troops held in Cincinnati till further orders. The city will be guarded till Wednesday at least.

ORDERED TO ARMS.

YOUNGSTOWN, March 31.—Governor Hoadly has ordered Lieutenant Colonel [illegible] of this city to rendezvous the Eighth regiment at Akron and then await orders.

PRESS COMMENT.

What the New York Papers Say of the Cincinnati Riot.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The Times, reviewing the Cincinnati riot, says: The murder of Kirk by Berner was the [illegible] murder ever committed in the criminal records of that county. Judge Carter, prosecuting attorney, declared that he escaped the death penalty by the outrageous [illegible] his fatter [illegible] had $500 or $700 to spend. This was not an isolated case. Twenty-three men confessed [illegible] or accused of murders are [illegible] to the jail of Cincinnati. There is but slight indication that at any time what is usually known as the lawless element was present in any considerable force during the riots. From the beginning up to the hour of last reports there has been a notable absence on the part of the crowd of any sympathy with criminals. There can be no doubt that violence in Cincinnati will be repressed, if it has not already been, before these lines reach our readers, but the lesson will not be lost. [illegible] criminal laws [illegible] will not be so profitable as it has been. The laws of Ohio will not continue to give confessed murderers twenty-three chances to get a purchasable jury and the state only two chances to get an honest one. The result may be worth more than it has cost.

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune thinks the riots a blistering disgrace and warning which ought not to pass unheeded. The dangerous tendencies of the population in large cities must be distinctly recognized. In moments of excitement there is a contagious readiness to resort to arms and violence. This is specially [illegible] a mania for destruction. Since the riots of 1877 prudent Americans have not dared to underrate the disturbing forces of social restlessness and property hatred [illegible] in large cities. One way of heeding the warning will be to add militia regiments in every densely populated state, and to increase the efficiency of the police force.

THE "WORLD."

The World says: Whatever may be the right to be outraged public opinion, there can be no reason or mercy shown to a mob. Cincinnati is learning this dread lesson. Lawlessness and anarchy can right no wrong and can make no headway at this time against the organization of military. It is possible the price Cincinnati is paying for this lesson is not too high.

BELFORD MAKES A STATEMENT.

How Garfield's Mind was Poisoned Against the Stalwarts.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The Sun prints a two column statement of Representative Belford of Colorado, relating a visit to Garfield in 1881 and the facts which were impressed on his mind that there was going to be trouble in the party and that a gang [illegible] were laboring to prejudice Garfield against Grant and his friends. The Sun says: Garfield was constantly worked upon by somebody whose political interest it was to persuade him that the entire stalwart wing of the republican party must be treated from the start as enemies of the new administration. Who was this somebody? The Sun suggests [illegible] contribution to Blaine's history [illegible] Conkling toward Garfield [illegible] until Garfield's mind was poisoned. The following also appears: After my interview with Conkling I went to Garfield and expressed the belief that the only [illegible] which would come to his administration would come from placing all his eggs in Blaine's basket. A few days after [illegible] Garfield I met [illegible] expressed the opinion that it would be wise in Garfield to appoint a [illegible] cabinet. [illegible] asked what I thought of the appointment of D. O. Mills of California. I stated that I was opposed to his appointment on account of his alleged connection with the Bank of California, with the Central Pacific railroad and with [illegible] it would be regarded as [illegible] monopolies.

RAILROAD NOTES.

STANDARD TIME.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The [illegible] railroad time convention says: Out of [illegible] railroads [illegible] report that towns [illegible] using standard time. Seventy-eight out of 100 of the principal cities named in the census of 1880, exclusive of the cities of the Pacific coast, have adopted the standard time as official. The Union Pacific railroad will adopt the new time on its [illegible] division when it makes up its spring schedule, and the Central Pacific will probably follow suit. This will doubtless bring the whole Pacific coast into the system. Most of the cities east of the Pacific coast that still retain standard time are in Ohio. They are six in number. Excepting Pennsylvania, where three cities hold to the old system, there are not more than two cities in any other state where the local time is used.

THE [illegible]

DENVER, March 31.—President Lovejoy of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad returned from New York this morning and [illegible] the city immediately asked the resignation of Colonel D. C. Dodge, general manager, J. A. McMurtrie, chief engineer, and B. F. Woodward, superintendent of telegraph. President Lovejoy refused to [illegible] reporters. [illegible] Dodge and McMurtrie [illegible] the city. It is believed this action will be canceled by the board of directors. The trouble grew out of a cheap rate contract made by the Palmer-Dodge management with the Colorado Coal and Iron Company, in which both are heavily interested.

PRESSED FOR INTEREST MONEY.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Coupons on the Mexican National [illegible] per cent. first mortgage [illegible] and coupons of $5,000,000 other bonds are due to-morrow. The company has asked the bondholders to fund the [illegible] per cent. coupons and receive therefor the funding obligations of the company bearing [illegible] per cent. interest, payable April 1, 1886. Bondholders have been asked to sign a waiver of interest. The document states that the company has become embarrassed, and cannot pay its April interest.

TELEGRAPHIC SPARKS.

It is reported that Mackay paid $1000 to have Conkling's speech on the Lasker resolution cabled to the foreign press.

Philip Bonine, a poor man of New Haven, has received papers which identify him as being a descendant of Napoleon I. and titles to an estate in France worth [illegible].

Colonel Fred Grant of Morristown will probably be a delegate to the Republican National convention.

THE DEAD PRINCE.

Gloomy Forebodings Oppress him on His Arrival at Cannes.

NEW YORK, March 31.—[Special.]—The Times' special from London says: A most extraordinary presentiment on the part of Prince Leopold is now related on the highest authority. On his way to Cannes the prince was conveyed aboard a private yacht owned by his favorite companion, Percival. This yacht was wrecked with the royal party aboard when but a short distance off Cannes. The wreck was complete, but no lives were lost, as help was near at hand, but the young prince was much prostrated by the alarm, and upon his arrival gave the strictest orders to keep secret the story of the accident because he feared the result of the intelligence upon the health of the princess. After noon, when Leopold had safely reached his apartments in the Villa Nevada, he lay down to sleep away his nervousness, and talked with his companion about the wreck. Leopold was unusually melancholy. He sat at a window [illegible] looking [illegible] the beautiful bay and casting a sorrowful look towards the place where the accident occurred [illegible] plainly. "Percival, I do not know why it is, but I have the most gloomy forebodings that I will have very ill luck. I would not mind it if it affected me only, but my evil fate seems determined to pursue my friends in sharing my misfortunes. I believe I am doomed to bring sorrow and death to all those I desire to be with me. [illegible] has [illegible] me inexpressibly to-day [illegible] I have been [illegible] myself if the thought that I would rather [illegible] been than anywhere else I have ever been." Percival tried [illegible] the prince out of his [illegible] but failed to effect his purpose. Leopold died in Percival's arms in the very room and [illegible] very window where he [illegible].

THE DUKE OF ALBANY'S FUNERAL.

A MECHANIC'S COMPLAINT.

PORTLAND, March [illegible]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Some few days ago there appeared an article in THE OREGONIAN commenting on the Portland people who send their work away to eastern cities and California in place of [illegible] it at home. There are some other people to whom the owners of these buildings [illegible] for this. Some of these people [illegible] you cannot get such a class of work done here in Portland, that it is necessary to send the work away to the east or to San Francisco. These persons know that this [illegible], but why they are interested in sending the work away is best known to themselves. Mr. Thompson's letter of the 14th says: "I would have been better [illegible] by a Portland architect." We all admit that. Perhaps Mr. Thompson would inform us who his Portland man is. There is just a chance that he might be as bad as the rest. I was told by some friends of mine who are plasterers, that the architect of the high school wanted to send to San Francisco for plasterers to plaster the building. This is certainly bad, but it is only one of them. There is another architect here (I think he is one they endeavor to palm off as a Portland man), who beats that easy. He enjoys a good record. He is well known among the merchants of Portland and respected accordingly. He is in favor of sending away for everything he can. To-day there are in this city 300 cabinet makers and carpenters as good as any country affords, who could be hired for reasonable wages and who are competent to finish any building inside and outside in any style.

There is another great mistake which some of our Portland architects make that has caused a great deal of dissatisfaction among the owners of buildings. This same mistake has had a tendency to discourage people from having a certain class of work done here. I refer to the hardwood finishing, that is the [illegible] and varnishing in its different branches. Architects generally make a practice of giving this work to the painters, who practically know nothing about it. [illegible] himself and has nothing to do with the painters. An architect in the east and San Francisco [illegible] specifications that this branch [illegible] be done by [illegible] finishers and [illegible].

There are several houses in Portland which have been badly marred in this respect and entirely [illegible]. If we are to have first class work done in Portland the architects must [illegible] doing, we shall [illegible] competent [illegible] here and thus obviate the necessity of sending [illegible] away.

A MECHANIC.

DR. MARVIN ON UNCONSECRATED MONDAY.

Dr. Frederic R. Marvin spoke Sunday morning at the Congregational church upon the [illegible] unconsecrated Monday. He said:

There is in [illegible] life a lamentable want of the practical spirit, and a harmful running after the fanciful and unreal. Sunday comes and from thousands of pulpits [illegible] scribed with burning eloquence and mapped off with mathematical precision. The earth is duly denounced, and the devil and his works are properly reprobated. Every Sunday a general cannonade is set up from hundreds of pulpits all over the land, and texts of scripture, like shot and shell, fly in every direction. The bells in numberless steeples [illegible] of Sunday school teachers march forth to battle, and one would suppose a few such Sundays would utterly rout the powers of darkness and inaugurate the millennium. But alas! Monday morning comes, and with it a [illegible] of hostilities. The [illegible] the clatter of machinery fills the air, and the hum of business and the routine of labor on every side. The smoke of conflict clears away and the prince of darkness comes off with a few scratches. Monday morning arrives, and the church says, not in words but in deeds, "Now Satan, we shall fight no longer. There shall be six days of armistice. When Sunday comes look out for yourself. We shall then ring all the bells in our high steeples and march forth with the entire artillery of the gospel to do battle for the Lord. We shall fight on Sunday, but the week days are thine, O Satan; do with them what seemeth good in thy sight." Immediately 435 [illegible] brewers and distillers celebrate the cessation of hostilities by recommencing the manufacture of liquor, and 110,000 saloons with a profound sense of relief open the front doors and remove the shutters. Into these saloons 2,000,000 occasional drinkers, 1,500,000 moderate drinkers, 310,000 hard drinkers, and 100,000 sots pour day and night. Verily this is a royal celebration of peace between the church and the gates of hell. This country spends $700,000,000 for intoxicating drinks every year, and all the boards of missions spend for the salvation of the world is something under $600,000. We call this a christian nation, and yet we give more than $40 to send men to hell for every one we give to send them the gospel of life. An unconsecrated Monday is the great curse of the church. We [illegible] Sunday religion to Sunday and leave the rest of the week to take care of itself. If we are to establish the kingdom of truth in the world we must take [illegible] Monday and spread it over the entire week. A Sunday religion will not convert the world.

I sat in the exchange and saw call after call made without a single transaction. The brokers [illegible] puzzled and despondent, and the commission on buying and selling cotton has been reduced. Ten Thousand Dollar Fire at Ainsworth—A Young Lady Shot and Instantly Killed—News Notes from the North.

The Society Sensation of the Day.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—[Special.]—Readers of THE OREGONIAN have been informed that Patti and Gerster and Mapleson, and the whole opera outfit have departed, bag and baggage, but not of the circumstance closely connected therewith which is agitating the public mind in this city. It is that M. H. De Young went with them as Patti's guest, across the continent. During the stay of the company in this city De Young, who has a magnificent [illegible] California street, treated them with great courtesy, Patti declining [illegible] attentions from others to accept De Young's, and now the little social world of San Francisco is in a tumult. The satirical papers have taken the matter up and are going for De Young in the most villainous fashion. The whole career of the De Youngs is being overhauled and commented on, and their social pretensions discussed with all the unreserve. The Wasp [illegible] represents De Young half immersed in a dark pool marked "Disgrace," [illegible] "degradation, fraud," etc., clutching with one hand to a ladder marked "Society," which he is attempting to climb. The lower part of the figure is dripping with filth from the pool and the upper part is faultlessly attired in evening dress. The matter is now the great social sensation.

Miss Brackett's Disappearance.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—[Special.]—Miss Brackett, who has been the companion and devoted friend of Sarah Althea Hill during the trial now in progress, has not appeared in the court room for over a week. Her unaccounted absence has caused much comment. Miss Hill appeared before Judge Sullivan in chambers Saturday night, alleging that Miss Brackett, who is her most important witness, had been tampered with by Sharon, and that she was about to go to Portland on the steamer sailing Sunday morning. A warrant was issued for her detention and the steamer Oregon was searched before departure. [illegible] the ship and [illegible] of attention by her [illegible] the fugitive. Miss Brackett's old [illegible] a few days ago that Sharon had offered her $2000 to "skip out," and this will doubtless explain her disappearance.

In connection with the Sharon divorce case, the [illegible] of to-day is the disappearance of Nellie Brackett. Her mother acknowledges that she is not [illegible] separation from Miss Hill, [illegible] and that Miss Hill abused [illegible]. The testimony to-day was unimportant.

FIRE AT AINSWORTH.

Nearly Ten Thousand Dollars' Worth of Property Consumed.

AINSWORTH, W. T., March [illegible].—[Special.]—About 7 o'clock [illegible] fire [illegible] started in the upper story of J. W. Shull's store and [illegible] was entirely consumed, with most of its contents. Also the railroad company's [illegible] house and the old hospital building, now the [illegible] Clerk's office on the south, the old office [illegible] and telegraph office, now the property of James Keith and Keith & [illegible] on the north, and a meat shop [illegible] in the rear, besides several minor buildings.

The division engineer's residence, now W. H. Gray's property, and the Pacific hotel were barely saved by strenuous efforts. Fortunately there was no wind, or little of the town would have escaped.

A bucket brigade drawing water from the yard engine did [illegible] service.

Many of the roomers at the hotel, including your agent, lost all their personal effects and some lost considerable money. Mr. Shull's family and several lodgers barely secured personal safety.

The approximate losses are as follows: J. W. Shull, $4000, insured for $2500; Keith & C[illegible], $3000, insurance $1250. The railroad company's loss is about $1000.

News Notes from Walla Walla.

WALLA WALLA, March 31.—[Special.]—Frederick Billings, through the Rev. Cushing Eells, has sent $1000 towards an endowment fund for Whitman college in this city. The people generally are subscribing liberally to this fund.

More raw land is being taken up in Walla Walla and Umatilla counties than ever before known. Land that was originally supposed only fit for sheep grazing is found to yield bountifully, especially in the Cold Spring country, where much good land near the railroad, a few miles from the Columbia, is yet vacant, both government and railroad.

AMERICAN SHIPPING.

PORTLAND, March 31.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Your article in Sunday's issue on American Commerce, which is largely made up of quotations from Lieutenant Kelly and John Codman, is one more likely to mislead than to throw light on the causes which have led to the decline and the present deplorable condition of our mercantile marine. It was but a short time ago that this same Kelly published an essay not only on shipping, but on free trade, for which he should have had the Cobden Club medal, but perhaps he got something more substantial. He is either most profoundly ignorant of his subject as far as American interests go, or wares and twists it for an object. John Codman is almost the father of the free ship movement, begun after a prolonged residence in Glasgow among the Clyde ship builders, and as he has no other visible means of support, he is not the only one by thousands that imputes wrong motives to this man. John Roach is the bugbear that he holds up to prevent our congress from giving or passing any measure of relief, and to this end he never [illegible] pen to paper without a liberal supply of abuse of this energetic ship builder. He [illegible] a foreigner who has established the business [illegible]. John Roach is foreign born, but at a very early age apprenticed himself to an American machinist and thoroughly learned his trade. I have heard Codman in a polished lecture denounce him as an Irish alien and a bungler. Which of the two is more worthy the latter epithet is shown by their work, for whilst the one strenuously opposes any bill put before congress, no matter how beneficial all its clauses may be, unless it also [illegible] the free ship clause, the other is steadily at work building elegant and commodious steamers for our coast lines and building iron sailing ships, one of which is now [illegible] this port, and for beauty of finish and strength can not be excelled. John Roach is also constructing steel cruisers for the navy, and saves to the government over all other bidders the pretty little sum of $80,000. As regards the few ship builders of which he speaks [illegible] mention, probably [illegible] capital invested, to say in ship building is fully equal to any other industry, excepting perhaps iron, wool and cotton. His comparison between the ships and commerce of [illegible], and the failure in two different towns, [illegible] as regards the importance of the [illegible] national view. In short, [illegible] writer of [illegible] considerable [illegible] and in my opinion [illegible] in this question. As to Lieutenant Kelly, he may be perfectly sincere, but as with [illegible] experience [illegible] wrapped up [illegible] with theories acquired in the course of his studies at the naval academy, [illegible] production are [illegible] free ships and free trade [illegible] heads know [illegible] to throw [illegible] the experiment of free commerce. Captain Codman insists on the building of no ships unless they are built in Great Britain [illegible]. On the other hand is only asked the removal of harassing disabilities and the carriage of our [illegible] the shipowner and the [illegible] of material to give the American ship builder a chance. Certainly there is nothing in this that can be imputed to John Roach or any one as being a wrong motive. Another great mistake is made in supposing the rebellion to be the cause of our decline in shipping. No doubt it helped to consummate what was already begun, but was far from being the primary cause. When the Cunard line was established in 1840, and for twenty years after, ocean steamers which were of the old side wheel pattern could not be made self-supporting, and a subsidy was the very life blood on which their very existence depended. So much space was required for engines and fuel that little or no room was left for cargo, and they were only suited to mails, passengers, and specie or other [illegible] freight. The Cunard line was heavily subsidized and [illegible] even in their construction. It must also be borne in mind that previous to this time all the [illegible] formerly by sailing packet ships and mostly owned in the United States, and with the advent of [illegible] passengers [illegible] much that was most profitable. In consequence the merchants of New York applied to congress for aid in offering to build a fast and substantial line of steamships. The aid was granted, though [illegible] the ships were built. They soon eclipsed the Cunard line in speed and comfort and were becoming very popular, when the [illegible] of the Arctic by collision and the Pacific, probably by [illegible], to shock the community and [illegible] congress revoked its aid, and just at a time when the company most needed it. England increased the subsidy to the Cunard company to enable it to construct larger and more powerful ships to compete with this very Collins line. After a long struggling voyage at ruinous loss the company collapsed, and from that time our foreign going steam navigation was virtually swept from the ocean. England [illegible] without competition [illegible] to improve her ships and marine [illegible] gradually absorbing all the Atlantic carrying trade, and the staunch American packet ships are also a thing of the past. It would be easy to trace in [illegible] different trades how the cheapening English steamer [illegible] our sailing ship, driving them out of one trade after another. But this article is already [illegible]. Such is the true cause of the [illegible] position we now occupy as a maritime nation, and had it not been for the lucky reserve [illegible] coasting trade that excited so much indignation in British circles, it is safe to say an iron ship would never have been built in this country, and the transit from here to San Francisco would be made in a British steamer.

STALLION EXHIBIT AT HILLSBORO.

HILLSBORO, Or., March 31.

The second exhibition of stallions for Washington county took place at Hillsboro last Saturday. The weather was fine and the turnout good, but there was a miserable blunder in the management by having the exhibition come off at 10 A. M. instead of 1 P. M., as everybody supposed. Many persons did not see the parade on this account. In fact there is too much exclusiveness cropping out, and the writer will take this occasion of saying that it is not good policy to always [illegible] with two large capitals.

THE PARADE

Was composed of mostly graded stock of different breeds, which were well represented. The graded Clydesdales led for their front, the old horse Glen [illegible], property of Prince [illegible]. In this lot were [illegible] any real practical horses, conspicuous was [illegible]. This horse seemed to have the sympathy of a large class, but he was not the only Clydesdale present.

In the Percheron class the half bloods are [illegible] showing better this year than formerly and are gaining [illegible] public esteem rapidly. For instance the horse [illegible] property of James Sewell last year looked very gangling and gawky, but this spring he is a fine horse and no mistake, filling his measurement perfectly, a splendid horse of his class. [illegible] showed to good advantage. Among the draft [illegible] of the old stock blood is Robert Imbrie's [illegible] he is [illegible] like a Christian and is always ready to pull.

THE TROTTERS

Were represented by Fred Hamilton, the property of [illegible] Rock, property of L[illegible] Marsden, Billy Reed, property of Sawyer and Jerome Porter, Orange Blossom. Billy Reed is certainly the finest roadster in the county, being a beautiful horse of exceptional carriage and plenty large for any farm work. Porter's Orange Blossom has grown and [illegible], and those who have seen him exercise this spring say that he certainly is a wonderful horse. It is so gratifying to notice that [illegible] are at the front, of which Mr. William Tompkins has the legal representative in Stonewall Jackson.

Of the thoroughbreds we have the finest stallions [illegible] in North America in the form of Glen Dudley, property of T. H. Tongue, and the old horse Ophir, property of I. P. W. Quimby. When [illegible] Ophir [illegible] some years since, no one would [illegible] him because he was the property of Ben Holladay, and nobody wanted any of Ben's stock, but having gone into other hands and shown some of as fast get as ever marked a track, together with the wonderful uniformity of breeding, he is hailed with pleasure by all who admire the [illegible] thoroughbred. Dudley's get promises all that the most enthusiastic admirers predicted for him.

I would like to mention James A. Imbrie's two Percherons and Clydesdales, Smith's Clyde, B. D. Buchanan's half Percheron, but cannot this time. I do not know that they were entered for the season, as the owners could not be found, but suffice it to say that some wondered at and others criticised the absence of Mr. Beach's horse, Altmont. One man remarked that Mr. Beach must think a good deal of his horse not to show him in Washington county's stud. Maybe Mr. Beach's horse has gone into politics.

Johnston Freeman showed your correspondent three [illegible], one particularly a Pathfinder, out of a pacing mare that promises exceedingly well as a trotter in every sense of the word; the other, a [illegible] is very good, also a half Clydesdale [illegible].

A Christian Woman's Work.

The Observer.

Some one who has noticed the influence of wives in promoting the good or evil fortunes of their husbands, said: "A man must ask his wife's leave to be rich." We doubt not that a similar observation of the influence of mothers upon their sons would justify the remark: "A man must ask his mother's leave to be great." Years ago a family of four—a father, a mother and two sons—dwelt in a small house, situated in the roughest locality of the rocky town of Ashford, Conn. The family was very poor. A few acres of stony land, a dozen sheep and one cow supported them. The sheep clothed them, and the cow gave milk, and did the work of a horse in plowing or harrowing. Corn bread, milk and bean porridge was their fare. The father being laid aside by ill health, the burden of supporting the family rested on the mother. She did her work in the house, and helped the boys do theirs on the farm. Once, in the dead of winter, one of the boys required a new suit of clothes. There was neither money nor wool on hand. The mother sheared the half-grown fleece from the sheep, and in one week the suit was on the boy. The shorn sheep was protected from the cold by a garment made of braided straw. The family lived four miles from the meeting house. Yet, every Sunday, the mother and her two sons walked to church. One of these sons became the pastor of the church in Franklin, Conn., to whom he preached for sixty [illegible] years. Two generations went from that church to make the world better. The other son also became [illegible] the most successful college [illegible]. Hundreds of young men were [illegible]. That heroic Christian woman's name was Deborah Nott. She was the mother of the Rev. Samuel Nott, D. D., and Eliphalet Nott, D. D., LL. D., president of Union college.

SEALED UNTO HIM.

A New and Powerful Story of Mormon Life

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

Joaquin Miller has become widely known as one of the most powerful dramatic writers America has ever produced. His stories are eagerly sought by the foremost periodicals of the country, and his great American drama, "The Danites," has been played for years to crowded houses throughout America and England. His "Songs of the Sierras," first published in London, awakened a furore of enthusiasm, and he was at once lionized by English society, his popularity equaling that of Bret Harte.

His life has been a singularly romantic one. When a lad he was taken to Oregon to live at a time when white settlers were almost unknown there. He practiced mining in California during that memorable period of excitement following the discovery of gold. He was one of the Nicaragua expedition in 1855 under General Walker, and after many adventures with Indians and miners, became a judge in Oregon. He is at present building a log cabin on one of the prominent sites at Washington, D. C., which he expects to occupy as soon as it is completed.

His new story, "Sealed unto Him," is founded on facts, some of them from his personal experience. It treats of the Danites or "avenging angels" of the Mormon church as they existed over thirty years ago. The foremost character, the one about whom the story revolves, is a Mormon elder, a leader of the Danites, a madman in his fanatical zeal, and a giant in stature and strength. He is one of the most powerful dramatic creations that have appeared in modern fiction.

The heroine of the story is a beautiful young lady, who, in an [illegible], is induced to become sealed to a Mormon elder before the sect had removed from Illinois to Salt Lake City. Fearing the vengeance of the Danites because of her refusal to accompany the elder as a wife to Salt Lake City, her father endeavors to spirit her away to California. On the journey overland the emigrant train which they accompany passes by Salt Lake City, and here it is the vengeance of the avenging angels overtakes them, and they are judged—and are not. The journey with its suspicions clustering around a [illegible] and mysterious figure which forms one of the [illegible], the suspense as they near Salt Lake City, the secret work of the Danites, the flight of the girl and her final fate, are told with a realism and dramatic force rarely found in the fiction of any age.

The story is [illegible] timely as well as a thrilling one. It deals with a people and a fanaticism that are at present the center of national interest, and an interest which is bound to grow greater before it grows less.

This story is now running as a serial through THE SUNDAY OREGONIAN. Two chapters were published in the issue of March [illegible], and it will be continued from week to week. The story can be had in no other Oregon paper. THE SUNDAY OREGONIAN will be furnished by mail at $2.50 a year, the SUNDAY and DAILY together at [illegible], or the SUNDAY and WEEKLY together at $4. Copies of the SUNDAY of March 30 can be supplied.

BABY LOST IN A CAR.

The Infant that was Carried to the Elevated Road's Property Room.

New York Journal.

The guard on the down train on the Sixth avenue elevated road was going to shout "[illegible] street next" when [illegible] infant [illegible] abruptly [illegible] station platform at Fourteenth street [illegible] on the track [illegible] train had not the ticket taker [illegible]. Mother and child were thus divided.

"How [illegible]?"

"What [illegible]?" the train hand asked [illegible].

The lady told the ticket taker that she had put the baby on a seat and forgot all about it when she stepped from the train. Then her senses came to her with a rush, but the train was again moving. The ticket taker assured the weeping mother that she [illegible] recover the child by calling at the property room in the Manhattan Railroad Company's building [illegible] Front street.

The baby rode to the Battery, leaving behind a train of squalls. It was [illegible] before Eighth street was reached, and kept everybody else wide awake. Very soon it had the whole car to itself. The gateman was a [illegible] man devoid of tact and barren of all the little wiles by which some men can [illegible] children. At Battery place the porter took the baby and immediately carried it to the property room at No. 4 [illegible] street, where it was promptly tagged "Lot No. [illegible]."

On the following train was the mother, who anxiously inquired at every station if her baby had been deposited there. She was [illegible] over and over again that it was in the train just ahead, and [illegible] almost every report was [illegible] quite well. At Battery place she alighted, and the newsboy was detailed to escort her to the company's building. There was general rejoicing in the property room. PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Mrs. John A. Andrew, widow of the war governor of Massachusetts, and her daughters have not signed the petition for woman suffrage, because they will not beg for what is theirs by right.

Mrs. James K. Polk, at the venerable age of 81, still lives in excellent health at Polk Place, Nashville, Tenn. She never had any children, but adopted a niece who married George W. Fall, a merchant of Nashville, and who, with her husband and only daughter Sadie, make up the happy family at Polk Place.

According to a table just submitted to Mayor Low of Brooklyn there were two arrests in that city for drunkenness in 1883 to every 100 inhabitants, and for each saloon nearly five arrests were made. The saloons are in the proportion of one to every 244 inhabitants.

It has been decided by the United States supreme court that photographs and negatives may be protected by copyright. The suit in which the question was raised was between rival firms in New York, one of which charged the other with infringement of a copyright upon a photograph of Oscar Wilde.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch thinks the best way to settle all difficulties between the two great parties would be by a joint debate between Henry Watterson of the Courier-Journal and Wharton Barker of Philadelphia, the debaters to be shut up in a committee room and the stakes to go to the survivor.

The following story is told in England apropos of the Dorsheimer copyright bill: When Charles Dickens was in America for the first time he dined at the house of one of the Harper brothers, the well known publishers. A little Harper came to the table. Dickens placed him on his knee and said: "You are a very fine boy; you are a very fine boy, indeed; you are the son of the greatest pirate on earth!"

The Lancet medical journal advises Mr. Gladstone to accept a peerage and retire from the house of commons, as his health is shattered and he has become too old to bear the weight of the work attached to the premiership. Many of his friends are of the same opinion.

Mortgage Taxation.

St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The incidence of this mortgage tax is fixed. It falls on the property owner, because he is the borrower. And it is always collected, because it is included in the interest charge. If then the state catches the holder of the mortgage, he simply passes over what he has already collected and the debtor is taxed twice for public purposes. But if the state does not catch the holder of the mortgage, as is not infrequently the case, then he does not pass it over. He has collected it just the same, for interest charges are fixed on the assumption that the tax will be paid out of them. But if the latter can be evaded, then the property owner is still taxed twice, once for the benefit of the state and once for the benefit of the man to whom his house or farm is mortgaged. Of all the cruelties practiced in communities where debtors are many and capital in great demand, few are more severe than this double taxation. It is one whose support people are deluded because they think they are mulcting the capitalist. It surpasses fable to find that there are to-day men otherwise intelligent who believe that money will seek mortgage investment at as low a rate when these securities are taxed as it would if they were exempt, and who are able to conceive of a mortgagee generously paying his dues into the treasury out of his own pocket, when he is perfectly able to add every dollar of them, as he invariably does, to the charges placed upon the borrower.

Charlie Bornum, a travelling tinker, is a curious character known in Maine and Vermont. He is 87 years of age, walks with a stooping gait, and uses two canes, one in each hand. The implements of his trade and a bundle are suspended from his neck by strings and straps. It is said that the old man is worth a good property. He has two sons who are well to do and desire to make a home for their parent in his last days, but he prefers to wander about the country.

Centaur Liniment.—An absolute cure for Rheumatism, Sprains, Burns, Galls, &c., and an instantaneous Pain-reliever.

New York

This is to certify that I am well acquainted with a man fifty years of age, for many years a resident of this city, who has been at times extremely ill, but could not tell from what cause, unless it was worms. He told his attending physician his suspicions, but the physician at once ridiculed the idea, and refused to attend him any longer. His son then mentioned Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and asked him if he would take it; his reply was—I must take something to get relief, or die.

They at once procured a bottle of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and he took one dose. The result was he passed upwards of three quarts of worms cut up in every form. He got well immediately, and is now enjoying excellent health; and, like a good Samaritan of old, is endeavoring to relieve his unfortunate neighbors. He makes it his business to hunt up and select all cases similar to his own that may be given over by regular physicians, and induces them to try Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge. So far he has induced more than twenty persons to take the Vermifuge, and in every case with the most happy results. He is well satisfied that Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, is far superior to any other known remedy, and that if more generally known would not fail to save many valuable lives. For further particulars inquire of Mrs. Hardie, 114½ Cannon street, New York City.

TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1884

AN IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT.

About two-thirds of the democrats in congress are hostile to protection and favor tariff reduction; the remaining one-third strenuously oppose reduction and insist upon maintenance of protection both in theory and practice. By long usage caucus has been the sovereign method of the party for settling all disputes. In this case, according to custom, caucus has been invoked, but it has failed utterly. Between fifty and sixty members defy it. They constitute a body too large to be thrust out of the party, and too powerful to permit the enactment of the new tariff bill over their opposition.

For keen enjoyment of politics the party out of power has all the fun and none of the trouble. Then, too, it has a vantage ground not to be despised. To the democratic party success in the years between presidential elections brings endless troubles and incalculable misfortunes. If the party had not on its hands a majority in the present house of representatives it would almost certainly succeed in the coming election. It could formulate its complaints against the republican party without the necessity of making out a policy of its own. This would win. But when the party has the bad luck to meet prematurely that degree of success which forces it to shoulder the burdens and responsibilities of power, its members can no longer agree even among themselves, and its enjoyment of politics and its prospect of the full fruition of victory disappear together. Had the democrats permitted the republicans to elect a majority of the members of the present house of representatives, the next administration would be democratic beyond peradventure. As it is, the democratic party is divided on a vital issue. Its representatives in congress are organized in two hostile factions, between which agreement is impossible, and the question that has produced this rupture will be carried into their national convention, where it will certainly cause a fierce struggle, and perhaps antagonisms that it will be impossible to compose or reconcile.

The protectionists, though numerically the weaker faction of the party, say they cannot possibly yield, because to do so would be to surrender beyond hope of recovery those northern states which the party must have or give up the contest, and perhaps also some of the southern states, as Louisiana and Virginia. This faction, led by Randall of Pennsylvania, Eaton of Connecticut and Converse of Ohio, protest against agitation of the tariff question because it threatens virtual annihilation of the party in the northern manufacturing states. The free trade faction, led by Carlisle and Morrison, answers that its own members constitute the majority, and that the majority ought to rule. Its spokesmen go further, saying that if the party does not intend to push the issue of tariff reform it has no reason to exist as a party, and ought not to claim success. Thus, the Boston Post says: "There is nothing more definite or immediate to the man who sees them than the evils of protection. With the exception of the comparatively few monopolists who profit by it through their unholy license to tax the many for their personal benefit, there is no man or woman in this broad land who is not injured by it. When we rise up or sit down, when we eat or sleep, or dress or ride or pray, we are paying tribute to those who neither directly nor indirectly render us any return for what they are permitted to exact. It is the duty of every revenue reformer in or out of the democratic party to fight this insidious and audacious evil untiringly and unceasingly. To those particular Ephraims in the party who stand in with protectionists and monopolists because their selfish interests seem to them to justify the alliance, we have nothing to say. Let them cling to their idols; let them join the enemies of democracy, with whose doctrines their doctrines are so nearly identical, if they wish to. In fact, it was an evil day that they ever brought their old whig vipers to be warmed at the democratic camp-fire. To that class of so-called democrats we have little to offer, except to express the hope that they will go in peace and never return." Again: "The question is not forced. It has merely grown from a vague generality that looked well in a political platform until it must be made the leading plank or the structure will not stand the strain. Unless we can recognize a great duty, and give it that consideration that is its due, as a party we have no excuse for being. The tariff issue embodies a great duty. If the democracy stand fairly and squarely on the doctrine of revenue reform it may win and it may not. It certainly cannot win in any other way. We are almost ready to say that if it flouts this duty and throws away this opportunity it has no business to win in any other way. The democratic party or any other party may wander aimlessly in the wilderness, if it will, but the tariff issue is not going to wait. If democrats will not bear it company and act as its ministry, they will be left behind, not this year only, but every year. We are much more anxious that democrats should build their houses upon the rock of peace, prosperity and progress for industrial America, even if it takes four years longer, than we are to see them risking their integrity in a temporary structure upon the shifting sands of political expediency." This is spirited and courageous. It is backed up by the Louisville Courier-Journal, a paper which is known to speak after consultation with the leaders of tariff reduction. It says: "If the Morrison bill is rejected it will be a disaster to the party. There is not room in the democratic party for those who will use party machinery, party prestige and capital to thwart the will of the great majority. Heretofore it has been difficult to deal with these malcontents; hereafter the course is plain enough. If the Morrison bill does not satisfy them, no measure the democratic party, without stultifying itself, could adopt and indorse would secure harmony. It is not harmony these men want; it is a complete surrender of party principle, the abandonment of everything which distinguishes the democrats from the republicans. For one—and we believe in this matter we speak for seven-eighths of the democrats in the country—we are opposed to sacrificing the party to Pennsylvania." It must be confessed that the Carlisle-Morrison faction has shown more pluck than could have been expected. Heretofore the protectionists have controlled the party without difficulty, and the free traders have submitted, apparently for the sake of harmony. But though the latter are showing spirit now they can accomplish nothing. The protectionists of the party are strong enough to obstruct the measures of the free traders and bring their efforts to naught; and it is plain, therefore, that matters will drift along till adjournment of the session, for which day members in both factions are wishing as earnestly as Wellington wished for night or Blucher at Waterloo. If the session can be tided over without disaster then the effort will be to work the party past the crisis of its national convention, by presenting a tariff platform which shall be a piece of verbal jugglery, capable of different interpretations. This may possibly be done; for though agreement between the factions in congress is plainly hopeless, there may be found in the convention a more accommodating spirit, due to the intense desire of a great element of the party outside of congress to get a chance in the distribution of the spoils.

An item yesterday which referred to the attorney for the Portland school district needs correction in this, namely, that there is no attorney employed at an annual salary. The law firm which has been doing the legal work for the district has been paid for special services as the same were performed, and, we are told, at lower rates than those charged for similar services rendered in the course of ordinary business.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS.

In some remarks before the American Bar Association at Saratoga Springs last summer Ex-Chief Justice Bradley of Rhode Island said that "what constitutes the worth of official decisions, what makes them in experience the just and safe basis upon which society rests, is not only that the court fulfills its oath of office in judging uprightly and impartially, but also that it speaks judicially only after it has been instructed by argument upon different sides of the question before it. No other opinions from it have the force, the weight or the wisdom of law." This was said in respect to a class of cases upon which the court is called upon to give opinions to other branches of government, the personal opinions of judges, which he contended, it is an unnatural and dangerous policy to introduce into our system of government. The recent legal tender decision of the supreme court was given without the aid of the instruction of counsel, though it was given in due form in a cause properly before the court, and it has the form if not the weight or the wisdom of a law.

But it is not true, as the New York Herald says, that this act of the court, "right or wrong, is subject to no appeal, review or reversal, save by the power to amend the constitution." While in the trial of ordinary causes popular opinion is a matter with which independent tribunals have usually but little concern, in the construction of the constitution it may be, as it has been, as vital as the law itself, because no constitution could stand that proved repugnant to the general sense. The support of popular opinion is not as essential now as it was when Chief Justice Marshall began the original construction of the constitution which had been the subject of the gravest difference of opinion among the wisest men on its most material points, and was adopted with great opposition. Its construction demanded such judicial treatment as could be reconciled to the universal judgment of the country. While the court is supreme over the executive and the legislative department in a large class of cases, though not in all, it is not supreme over the sovereign—the people themselves; for sovereign power is in its very nature incapable of limitation. Neither is it true that the decision of a court closes discussion even in that forum. The opposing decisions on this very act—the legal tender act—are proof of this, as is also the history of the jurisdiction over corporations and the admiralty jurisdiction of the same court. Still less does a judicial decision close discussion in legislative bodies and before the people. As Judge Bradley said, "The judiciary is like a dam, which holds back public action for a time, but for a time only. The great current of human life and thought is paramount to it and must sooner or later have its course."

Gen. Garfield said that "unsettled political questions have no pity for the repose of nations." None of those questions are settled until they are settled right. The administration of justice is more a matter of common sense than the intricate and obscure, though pompous, inconsistent opinions of many judges would indicate. While originality is neither expected nor tolerated in courts of justice, which sit to determine the existing law, in the light of authoritative precedents and statutes, great judges do not blindly follow precedents without consideration of the fundamental principles which must underly all statutes. When Mansfield declared that no slave should tread the soil of England; when Parsons said that none but freemen could breathe the air of Massachusetts, when Harrington declared that no man could establish a title to a human being in his Vermont court, unless he produced a bill of sale from the Almighty, and when Camden declared that general warrants were inconsistent with English liberty, these judges did not search for precedents nor care for them. They brought the law of the land to the high level of the principles of human freedom, toward which the race was struggling. When our supreme court decided that the negro had no rights which the government was bound to respect, its decision was not final. The American people overruled it. And so we believe this declaration of the court, that the people have no rights, which it is bound to sanction, when the knaves or fools of this or other times pass acts for stealing their wages or earnings from them by the issue of legal fiat money, will be overruled or ignored.

REASONS FOR NOT TAXING MORTGAGES.

Those states which have had most experience with the problems of taxation have arrived at the conclusion that taxation of credits is bad policy. Thus, the Baltimore Sun, in speaking of the exemption of mortgages from taxation in Maryland says:

> The expediency of exempting mortgages from taxation was determined upon by the legislature in the session of 1870. Since that time repeated efforts to restore the tax have failed to convince the public of the propriety of interfering with the exemption. * * It is unfortunately too true the agriculture languishes in many of the counties of the state, and that the owners of lands in those counties are heavily indebted. Their only source of credit and of relief lies in mortgaging their lands to carry on their industries, and with the credits thus obtained to win back from the soil enough to restore what they have borrowed and to maintain their families in the meanwhile. They are not free agents but through their necessities are compelled to borrow money on terms which the lender exacts in a business way, and which terms would be, as they have always been, that the borrower pay all the taxes which the state may levy on the mortgage debt. The farmer already pays a tax on the full value of his land. If he pays a tax on the mortgage debt also, he is unduly burdened by the state and required to pay more than justice demands of him. Is it right for the state in such a case to add to the misfortunes of the debtor farmer by imposing upon him a punishment for mortgaging his land, for in substance it amounts to a penalty paid by him for going to the money-lender?

This exactly describes the case in our state. The tax upon the mortgage is a tax which must be paid by the borrower, if not directly, then through increased rates of interest and other charges; and the mortgage tax therefore becomes a penalty which the owner of the land must pay for going to the money lender. We quote further from the Sun:

> If it is desired to tax the capitalist, evidently the capitalist cannot be effectively reached in that way, for while it might prevent the escape from taxation of a few rich men, it would punish a very large number of poor and needy borrowers, land owners, by making them pay the taxes due, theoretically, from the holders of mortgages on their lands. * * * It has been found in practice that the mortgagee always compels the mortgagor to pay the tax, as he does every other expense incident to the mortgage; and he always will do so, for the simple reason that the borrower in order to obtain the assistance he desires must do so upon the terms of the lender. The position has recently been taken by the advocates for the tax that, however it might have been when the rates of interest on money were high, the present low rates of interest and the difficulty of getting investments for money have altered the condition of things so that the lender and not the borrower is now the suppliant. This position is utterly fallacious. It is happily true that the rates of interest are no longer so exorbitant as to be absolutely ruinous, but it is not true that the people of the counties, the southern and eastern counties, have any accumulated wealth among themselves which makes money easy amongst them. They are borrowers from the richer men of the cities or some of the upper counties; the prices of their own lands are low, labor amongst them is scarce and high, and while there may be a greater number who will lend to them at lower rates of interest than before, there is not that competition among lenders, nor is it likely there soon will be, which will put the borrowing class on equal terms with them. The state cannot afford to replenish its treasury at the expense of oppressing any portion of its citizens. And until some scheme of legislation can be devised, which in practice shall equalize the burden of taxation, it is the bounden duty of the state to abstain from the exercise of a power which as an abstract theory is defensible, but which in its actual operation would be onerous, tyrannous and unjust to the last degree to a portion of the people who have in a great measure been the unfortunate victims of a course of events over which they have had no control, and from the bitter consequences of which no way of escape has yet been found.

This is unanswerable. It shows that the state cannot afford, by taxation of credits, to throw this additional burden on the debtor class, for that is the necessary consequence of such taxation. Our people in the agricultural counties, when they insist on taxation of mortgages, take a stand directly against their own interests; they demand a policy which directly increases their own burdens; yet many of them profess to think that they are successfully compelling the money-lender to bear his share of the burden of government. It is a fallacy, a delusion because "the borrower, in order to obtain the assistance he desires, must do so on the terms of the lender," and the lender will take care of his interests in the transaction by exacting enough from the borrower to pay for all the state takes or threatens to take out of his income. Had we neither usury law nor mortgage tax law there would be no reason money would not be abundant throughout Oregon at six per cent.—a rate which farmers could pay and have them a chance to get out of debt. But under the present system interest will be kept at high figures, and many farmers, in the end, will lose their lands.

THE MORALITY OF MONEY.

A recent dispatch from Newport, R. I., to the New York Sun announcing the decision of the will case of Rev. Dr. Mercer says: "Dr. Mercer always pleaded poverty, and paid tax on a nominal sum. After his death it was found that he was worth over $1,000,000, which was invested in the best paying railroad and other securities in the country." Avarice is not a common vice among clergymen, for the reason, perhaps, that few of them succeed in accumulating money enough to excite that passion. Balzac said that avarice begins where poverty ends. As a rule, generosity is in inverse ratio to the ability to give. A man who has only two dollars will give away one of them, but a man who has two millions will not divide his fortune with the poor. Avarice is the result of false notions of the value of money. Beyond the feelings of security against the contingencies of sickness and a feeble old age, money is of no value except as an element of power or a means of usefulness. The experience of mankind shows beyond question that the truest happiness is found among people of moderate means. Almost every man who has passed that point looks back to the time when he was moderately well off, when he had "neither poverty nor riches," as the golden period of life. Clergymen generally understand the true value of money as well as any class of people. If they err at all it is usually on the side of improvidence. They are somewhat infected, doubtless, with the prevailing vice of tax dodging, though it is seldom that one errs so conspicuously in that direction as the Rhode Island doctor of divinity who pretended poverty in order to escape taxation. The divinity which they are fond of doctoring is very rarely Mercury, whom thieves invoke, or Plutus, to whom misers pray.

It is doubtless true, however, that the usefulness of the clergy as a class would be directly increased if they were pecuniarily more independent. The more we see of life, the life of ministers and of the professional classes generally, politicians, judges and editors, the more we are impressed with the value to personal character and dignity, as well as to personal usefulness, of pecuniary independence. And by this we do not mean large wealth, for that is not independence. There is a point beyond which money is a source of embarrassment, varying according to the tastes or circumstances of the individual. But a few thousand dollars, it need not be more than ten thousand, safely invested where it yields a certain income, is not only a pecuniary but a moral support. And if clergymen would speak frankly from their own experience we have no doubt that they would advise every young man who proposes to enter either of the professions we have named, to strive to reach as soon as possible such a degree of pecuniary independence. If a young man sets out with this purpose, to accumulate, say, ten thousand dollars by the time he is thirty years old, or, if he is a minister or an editor we will say that amount by the time he is forty, he can do so in almost any place in this country where there is an opportunity for him to do anything. Such a purpose will be a great moral protection in itself to one starting in life. It will exclude beer, whisky, cigars, gambling, billiards, horses and dogs, and other expensive forms of dissipation, recreation and vice. It will develop business habits and a knowledge of business which professional men are apt to lack, and when the money is saved and safely invested, the man is his own master. No one ought to enter politics at all until he is pecuniarily independent. It is almost impossible for one to do so and be a man about it. The temptation to sell out to a corporation or to act from selfish motives generally, has been the stumbling block to the poor politician, and the emptiness of the minister's pocket has caused him many times to be treacherous to Christ by prophesying smooth things concerning the men who occupy seats on the broad aisle. Editors have suffered from the same demoralizing influence. In a recent article on the tendencies of American journalism, Mr. E. V. Smalley, who having been the editor of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, probably speaks from experience when he says that "the newspaper that fills the highest functions of journalism must be owned by the men who make it. The most threatening evil of current journalism is the hidden hand of the outside capitalists, laid upon it to shape its opinions and manipulate its views." The editor who is pecuniarily independent can make and keep his paper independent, and the surest way to acquire that position is not by submission to the hidden hand of the capitalist. The pulpit of this country has by precept, if not by example often taught a doctrine contrary to this and done much damage thereby. It is a shocking thing, of course, for a minister to lie about his property in order to escape taxes, or to be in the least degree avaricious, but a correct regard for money, as a means of personal usefulness and power, would give to the clergy as well as to the editor, politician or judge a moral stamina, and a protection against the corrupting influence of money itself, in this age when men who will stand for humanity and against money are especially needed.

This BELT or Regenerator is made expressly for the cure of derangements of the generative organs. There is no mistake about this instrument, the continuous stream of ELECTRICITY permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. Do not confound this with Electric Belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. It is for the one specific purpose. For circulars giving full information, address Cheever Electric Belt Co., 103 Washington st., Chicago, Ill.

PROPOSALS FOR WOOD AND COAL.

Headquarters Department of California, Office of Chief Quartermaster, Presidio of San Francisco, Cal., March 28th, 1884.

SEALED PROPOSALS, in triplicate, subject to the usual conditions, will be received at this office and at the offices of the Quartermasters at the following named posts, until 11 o'clock A. M., San Francisco time, on Tuesday, April 22, 1884, at which time and places they will be opened in the presence of bidders for furnishing and delivery of military supplies during the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1884, as follows: Wood at Fort Bidwell, Fort Gaston and San Diego Barracks, Cal., and Forts Halleck and McDermit, Nevada. Also at the same time, AT THIS OFFICE ONLY, for military supplies for the same period, as follows: Wood and Coal at Presidio of San Francisco, Benicia Barracks and Fort Winfield Scott, and Coal at Alcatraz Island, Angel Island, Fort Mason and San Francisco, Cal.

The government reserves the right to reject any or all bids. Preference given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and such preference given to articles of American production and manufacture produced on the Pacific coast to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there.

Blanks and full information as to bidding, etc., will be furnished on application to this office, or to the quartermasters of the posts named. Envelopes containing proposals should be plainly marked "Proposals for Wood (or Coal) ——," and addressed to the undersigned or to the respective Post Quartermasters.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

GOT AROUND THE INJUNCTION.

Sheriff Sears Collects Mortgage Tax from the Foreign Corporations Notwithstanding Judge Deady's Decision.

Yesterday Sheriff Geo. C. Sears collected from the Dundee Mortgage and Trust Investment Company $3259 76, the amount assessed against them on the tax roll for mortgages held in Multnomah county. It will be remembered that in a suit brought by the above corporation in the United States circuit court to enjoin Sheriff Sears and the sheriffs of thirteen other counties from collecting taxes assessed under what is commonly known as the mortgage tax law, Judge Deady on the 6th of last month decided in favor of the plaintiff and issued the injunction asked for.

Acting under advice of Hon. L. B. Stearns, judge of Multnomah county, the sheriff erased from the assessment roll the amount set opposite the name of the Dundee company, which amount was placed in the column headed "mortgages," and he entered the same sum under the heading "sheriff's assessments," assuming that right under the statutes of Oregon. About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon he visited the bank and demanded the amount of tax due, and threatened, if it was not paid immediately, to levy on the property or close the bank. After considerable discussion of the question, the amount was paid under protest. Following the same line of proceedings, he collected mortgage taxes from the Oregon & Washington mortgage savings bank, Ladd & Tilton, and the Bank of Oregon, netting in all nearly $17,000. It is likely that the Dundee company will ask the United States court to require of Sears to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of its order. In this case, he will plead that he did not collect tax on mortgages, but simply on a sheriff's assessment. His action yesterday nullifies Judge Deady's decision, so far as practical benefit to the plaintiff is concerned.

THE EFFECT.

Commenting on the collection of the mortgage tax, despite the injunction of the United States court, a gentleman connected prominently with a foreign loaning institution, said to an OREGONIAN reporter last night that it would entail serious hardship on borrowers in this county. Many loans on mortgages became due several months ago, and the managers of banks promised while the injunction suit was pending, to extend the time, provided the decision of the court was in their favor. Now that they have been compelled to pay the tax, the only course, our informant thinks, is to withdraw the loans, and he expects such orders from his home office forthwith.

BRIEF MENTION.

All fool's day.

Annual meeting of the Ladies' Relief Society this afternoon.

Meeting of Ladies' Aid Society of Congregational church to-day at 2:30 o'clock.

Two Pullman sleepers left St. Paul yesterday to be put on the route between Kalama and Tacoma next week.

The Alden Besse brought about 31,000 mats of rice, of fifty pounds each, and the fear of famine in Chinatown is at an end.

A poor woman who can ill afford it lost a satchel marked "M. A. T." containing some money. The finder will please inform the police.

William Owens, who stole Mrs. Riggs' horse and buggy Sunday night, waived examination in the police court, and was held in $400 bonds.

Much has been said and written concerning the origin of April fool's day, but it is doubtful whether any earlier mention is made of it than that contained in Esther x, 4.

The Natural Science Association will meet at their room, No. 11 Union block, Wednesday, April 2, at 8 o'clock P. M. Paper by W. H. Smith; subject, "Origin and Distribution of Coal."

The ladies of the United Presbyterian Mission give a social at their hall, corner of First and Clay, this evening. A pleasant time is anticipated, and all friends of the mission are most cordially invited.

Another ten-mile bicycle race between Gove and Partridge, at the pavilion, to-night. The last race run between these gentlemen was so close that friends of both are anxious to see them ride again.

Yesterday being the regular motion day in the state circuit court, the trial of the breach of promise case of Clarke vs. Doran was not taken up. It will, however, be continued upon the opening of court this morning.

John C. Harlow, son of the late Capt. John Harlow, died of consumption yesterday near San Buena Ventura, California, where he went a few months ago for the benefit of his health. His body will be brought here for burial.

The force of street cleaners under Overseer Jack Holman have been filling up a great number of depressions and washouts along the curbs around the park blocks, using the street scrapings and much improving the appearance of the sidewalks.

A large lot of smelt was received here yesterday from Lewis river. The little fellows composing the second run appear to have given the Cowlitz river the go-by and passed on to the Lewis. They will probably keep on up as far as the Sandy.

The ship Tillie E. Starbuck, libeled by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for damages to the material for the railroad transfer boat, was released from custody yesterday, the consignees, Taylor, Young & Co., having furnished the necessary bonds.

The huge plaster ornaments which have hung so long as a part of the ceiling in the state circuit court room, much to the peril of every one who passed underneath them, were removed yesterday, and a thin layer of plastering substituted. All who have occasion to sit in the court will feel safe now.

"Don't you think $5 is too much for a ticket to the Knight Templars' ball?" asked a timid member of the Ladies' Relief society of a gentleman friend yesterday. "I paid $25 for two tickets to hear Patti a few days ago," was the answer, "and I think I can as well afford to pay $5 to go to a ball, particularly as it is for a good object." She sold the ticket.

THE BURBANK MURDER TRIAL.

CORVALLIS, March 31.

The case of the State vs. Asa Burbank, indicted for murder in the first degree for killing Thomas J. Dennis on Dec. 29, 1883, comes up for trial in the state circuit court before Judge Bean this morning. The state is represented by George S. Washburne, of Eugene City, acting district attorney, assisted by J. W. Rayburn, of Corvallis. The defense is represented by R. S. Strahan, of Albany, Judge Burnett and Judge W. S. McFadden, of Corvallis. The state relies wholly upon circumstantial evidence, but this evidence is said to be very strong. Dennis was the father-in-law of Burbank, and is supposed to have been shot by Burbank while they were out hunting together in the mountains between Alsea valley and Grass mountain.

The cause of the shooting is involved in some mystery. The deceased had discovered a mineral mine, titanium supposed to be of considerable value, and the supposition is that Burbank desired to put Dennis out of the way in order that he might get possession of the mine. The case is creating considerable interest here and three-fourths of the people in upper Alsea valley are in attendance upon court. Over one hundred witnesses have been subpœnaed and the case will be very hotly contested. The defense thus far have been thwarted in all their efforts to delay the case till next term.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Asher Marks of Roseburg is at the Clarendon.

Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge, president of the O. R. & N. Co., is expected to start for Portland early next week.

William T. Lewis of Mitchell, Lewis & Co., Racine, Wis., came up on the last steamer and will return home via the Northern this evening.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR BALL.—Tickets for this event, which is announced for May 1, are in great demand, not only in Portland, but in neighboring cities, and the affair promises to assume proportions greater than the most sanguine had expected. The committee of arrangements consists of the following gentlemen: P. S. Malcolm, J. R. Foster, J. McCraken, D. P. Thompson, H. B. Thielsen, Stuart McLure, E. D. White, D. S. Turhill, and D. W. Taylor, of this city, J. J. Spencer, of Lafayette, and Dr. O. E. Nottage, of East Portland.

STREET CONTRACTS.—The contract for improving Alder street from First to Fourth was let yesterday to Ham & Taylor for $697 48. Other bids were the P. M. & P. Co., $909 46; James Fralney, $834 23. A contract for the same street from Twelfth to Lownsdale was let to Buys & Jeffery for $731 05.

EUGENE NOTES.

EUGENE, March 31.

Miss French, of The Dalles, is here on a visit to Miss Franc Odell.

Mr. Savage is so far convalescent as to be able to return to his home at The Dalles to-morrow.

Last Saturday evening one Schmidt, the proprietor of the "Owls," met his death, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury, by delirium tremens.

Rev. E. T. Lee, of Portland, has accepted the invitation to address the Laurean and Eutaxian Literary Societies next June. Rev. G. W. Izer will address the faculty and students of the university during the same week.

In the city marshal's report to the council for the year ending April 1, 1884, he states that the number of residences erected during the year is fifty four; total cost, $50,000; brick buildings, five. He gives the actual population of Eugene at a little upwards of 2070.

Grand Opening.

Tuesday and Wednesday, 1st and 2d of April, will be the opening days of the spring and summer styles of millinery goods at Miss A. S. Jorgensen's, No. 103 First street. It is but justice to say that the assortment is the finest ever displayed in this city, all of the latest Parisian and Eastern designs selected by Miss Jorgensen herself, she having a number of years' experience and knowing the wants of her customers and market in general. There is no reason why she should not suit them all, with just the styles they wish for. The ladies of Portland and vicinity should not miss opportunity to examine her stock and judge for themselves.

Mr. L. Williams, the leading watchmaker, has removed to 105 First street, occupying part of Gardner Bros' music store. Mr. Williams has had sixteen years' experience in France, Germany, England and Switzerland, and prior to his engaging in business for himself was associated with some of the leading jewelry houses of this city. Having purchased direct a large line of watches, jewelry, clocks, etc., for cash, he is prepared to sell cheaper than any other store in town. Give him a call at his new quarters. Fine watch repairing a specialty.

REOPENED.—The St. James hotel, on the corner of Fourth and Morrison, has recently been reopened under an entirely new management, and hereafter will be known as the Clyde house. It has been refurnished throughout, and will be kept strictly first-class.

Special Notice.

Mrs. Mary H. Carr, the well known caterer of Portland, will reopen her ice cream and dining rooms for the accommodation of ladies and gents on Tuesday morning, April 1, 1884, and will be pleased to have her old patrons and friends to call. No pains spared to please. Strictly first-class meals. No. 91 southwest corner Fourth and Stark.

Carriages and Buggies.

Our stock for the spring trade is very complete. The largest on the northwest coast, and prices as low as first-class goods can be sold. North Pacific Manf'g Co., Twenty-second and T streets, Portland, Or., W. Jackson & Co., proprietors. Take Washington and Third street cars to factory.

Suits to Order.

We have over 300 samples of cloths, and we take measures for clothing in New York. Guarantee a perfect fit. Deliver in three weeks at 30 per cent lower than Portland merchant tailor prices. Call and see us. Kohn & Steinbach, 161 First street.

INVESTIGATING THE DEPUTY CHIEF.

Another Fruitless Session Last Night in which Watkinds Pursues his Customary Tactics.

The investigation of the deputy chief of police was resumed at the council chamber last evening, Councilmen Gordan, Haley, Adams, Sears and Chittenden being in attendance.

It was the deputy chief's "night to howl," and his counsel called a long string of witnesses, who stood up in a class and were sworn on the popular plan, to save Clerk Curry trouble. For all the good the witnesses did the deputy chief, the trouble of calling them might have been saved, such a complete failure to establish anything of any kind has seldom been witnessed.

Mr. Page, counsel for the deputy chief, was allowed to finish the reading of the great answer prepared for the deputy chief by some of his scribes beginning where he left off at the last meeting. This document was as lengthy as tiresome and amounted to as a last year's bird's nest.

Policeman Byrne was called. He had heard Capt. Turner give the men notice to be at the meeting of the committee, but didn't know whether Johnson heard it or not.

Policeman Healey heard Turner tell the deputy chief that he had ordered Johnson to know nothing against deputy chief's character.

Captain Turner certified that he had noticed Johnson. He knew of money being stolen around the police office. Had heard of mistakes being made in the records; has seen them and had corrected them, had made a mistake once in a while himself. Captain Hare had made as many as he had, never knew of Johnson making any.

The deputy chief stated that there had been things missing all along, and when he tried to investigate some one got indignant. This sort of thing was happening every day. Governor Moody himself had applied at the office only a day or two since for money said to be stolen from a prisoner. The deputy chief claimed he had not suspended Johnson, but when asked by Councilman Sears to define the difference between suspension and taking away a star, he could give no satisfactory answer. He paid Mr. Johnson a high tribute for his faithfulness and efficiency as an officer. He only contradicted the testimony of Captain Hare and one or two others, which was very mild for him.

Every time Mr. Page would say anything the deputy chief would supplement it, and Page kept telling him to keep still and not to interrupt him, till at last the committee ordered that only the counsel should speak, and this sat down on the deputy.

There was not a single point made by any of the witnesses in favor of the deputy chief. The inconsistencies of the whole affair seemed to amuse the members of the committee.

Ex-Chief of Police Besser was called during the evening to tell what he knew about running a police force. The deputy chief kept "chipping in" and counsel remarked that Besser might be left alone, as he knew enough to attend to his own business. Councilman Healey remarked that there was one instance on record when Besser had failed to do so and that was the time he had let Tom Connell get hold of his business.

In his desperate efforts to fix something on Johnson the deputy chief called one Nugent and endeavored to besmirch the character of a respectable lady at whose house Johnson had roomed for several years. This was the worst failure of all and another witness whom the defense had sworn but failed to call was called by the plaintiff and took the deputy chief to task for his imputations, who immediately ate humble pie and will probably have to explain some more. Judge Stott addressed the committee briefly, claiming that the attempt to suspend Johnson was made through malice. Mr. Page in reply claimed that it was done with the best intentions and for the greater glory of the police force.

The committee adjourned till Saturday night next, when they will take up the consideration of another of the deputy chief's temporary suspensions in the case of Wm. Tennant.

PROTEST AGAINST A PEANUT STAND.

PORTLAND, March 31.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN.

Permit me to enter protest against the peanut wagon stands on the sidewalks, which are none too wide for that passengers and were never dedicated for the use of peanut stands such as the one near Ladd's bank.

Are the city funds so low as to necessitate giving up the sidewalk on business streets to get a license from peddlers?

CITIZEN.

The above is one of two written complaints received by THE OREGONIAN about the peanut stand in front of Ladd & Tilton's bank, placed in position yesterday. Personal complaints came by the score to reporters. Permission was asked from the city council at its last meeting by an old man to use a part of the sidewalk with an ordinary portable peanut stand, and the matter was referred to the committee on streets, with power to act. The petitioner represented that he was a cripple, and had no other means of earning a livelihood. Members of the council thinking it better that a man should have an opportunity to work, rather than to beg, gave consent. But the old man presumed too much. He has built a house big enough for a whole family to sleep in and then put a roof over it, covering just half the sidewalk. The public, out of consideration for a helpless man might consent to a small obstruction, but this one is too much for ordinary patience.

ESTABLISHED ANEW.—As the world grows wealthy society imperatively demands that every lady's toilet shall grow more perfect in elegance. Hence newest fabrics of the past year are to-day antiquated, and styles of to-day the absorbing topic. Mr. Shane of "The City Dry Goods Store," 147 Third street, alive to the necessity of meeting this problem squarely, arranged with his former partners, on dissolution of partnership, that they take the old stock, and to-day he is in his old store with an entire new stock, largely of his own direct importations. We understand he intends carrying, as heretofore, a very large stock of first-class goods. We wish him success.

"THE NORTHERN."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Will you allow an attentive reader of your interesting paper to make a suggestion against the growing habit of using the above abbreviation for the name of the great continental railroad with which our interests are so much identified. The saving of time and space thus made is a very small matter, when so much time and space are wasted on superfluous and unmeaning words. Beside such abbreviations being in questionable taste, this one is damaging for want of clearness. THE OREGONIAN, I imagine, reaches a large circle of readers outside of Oregon and Washington territory, where our provincialisms are unknown, and such may easily be confused or misled by this useless abbreviation.

I would say the same of the habit of calling the steamer State of California "the State." It is an undignified style of writing, bordering upon slang, and unbecoming in a paper of the character of THE OREGONIAN.

LOOKER-ON.

SUPREME COURT.

SALEM, March 31.

State of Oregon vs. Samuel Hayward and James Hayden—Continued until next term.

A. R. Burbank vs. Charles H. Dodd—Placed at the foot of the docket.

E. Lovejoy vs. Dubois & King—Placed at the foot of the docket.

Coolidge & McClain vs. Forward & Hensky—On trial.

Southern Oregon.

The democratic county central committee of Douglas county have fixed Friday, April 11, 1884, at 10 o'clock A. M., for holding the county convention for the selection of seven delegates to attend the state democratic convention.

The roadbed for the O. & C. railroad is finished to the 147th mile-post, which is just south of Ashland. The track will be laid to this point soon.

Michael L. Shupe died in Oakland on the 2d inst. He was well known, and came to Oregon in 1853, first locating in Linn county, and in 1854 settling on his donation land claim near Oakland, in this county, which was his home until death. He was born in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, August 12, 1810, removing with his parents to Ohio when quite young, where he married Margaret Vannordstrand, with whom he lived happily until her death, Feb. 12, 1879. Previous to coming to Oregon he had resided in Missouri, since 1835. Of eight children only three survive him, two of whom reside in this county.

Making Love to Mrs. Siddons.

Letters from the Diary of Henry Greville.

Talleyrand asked if Fox had not been "tres occupé de Mme. Siddons?" "Oh, no," said Brougham, "that was no, possible; one might as soon have thought of loving the sea as Siddons. She was of far too high an order of beings to inspire love. The East India Company might have dared to love her—nothing short of that."

A Refined lady in reduced circumstances, having diamonds, etc., pawned for $600 at Uncle Myers's, No. 151 First st., wishes to meet an elderly gentleman, to assist her in redeeming the same.

CONTRACT FOR THE PARK ROAD.

Variation of 200 per cent. between the Highest and the Lowest Bid.

Bids were received yesterday for construction of a road in City park, about one mile in length, half of it sixteen and the other half twenty-four feet wide, and including clearing of timber and stumps from roadway and sewer, and embracing 7930 cubic yards excavation, 5455 yards embankment, 10 yards solid rock excavation, 56 feet culvert 10x10 inches in the clear, and 24 feet box drain 4x6 inches in the clear. Following are the bids received for the whole work:

R. S. Riley	$1,559	Dan Horan	$3,226 42
M. Tierney	1,7?? 26	Wm. Sweeney	3,306 ??
P. Reilly	2,515 27	S. Wilcox	3,772 50
M. S. Higgins	3,0?? 45	Buys & Jeffery	4,225 00
Aspland & Dick		Aspland & Dick	4,057 00

The work, which is to be completed by June 1 next, was let to R. S. Riley, the lowest bidder. Other contractors consider the work will be done at a loss, although the bid of M. Tierney's but little higher, and he has the reputation of being close figurer. It would be interesting to know by what system of calculation the bidders arrive at the amount for which they are willing to do the job. Over $2000 difference on a job which is let for about half that sum shows some wild calculation. The contractors for each have apparently a strict some better system of mathematics, as only one of the highest cost they are not to differ more than $100 or $200. The true inward-ness of this difference on street contracts is only otherwise, which we allow the outsider is expected to understand.

ALBANY NOTES.

ALBANY, March 31.

Thirty-six emigrants have located in this city within the past week.

Mr. Gross, of the Depot hotel, has returned from a recreation tour to the front of the road.

Freddie, two years old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cline, died Friday night. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock yesterday.

Wm. Miller has resigned his situation as night-watch and engineer. The vacancy was filled by the election of A. A. Roberts.

The ladies of the Industrial society of the M. E. church will give a sociable at Mrs. F. W. Westfall's to-morrow (Tuesday) evening.

Friday while Mr. Dee, a truck driver, was assisting a blacksmith in shoeing an unruly horse, the animal caught Mr. Dee's hand in his teeth, mangling it badly.

The lecture which was to have been given next Wednesday evening at the M. E. church by Prof. Van Scoy, president of the Willamette university, has been postponed.

The first of the week Best & Alphouse shipped sixty-to car-loads, consisting of parts of their grain elevator, which will be taken to San Francisco and there put together.

The city council, at its last session, passed an ordinance making it unlawful to explode fire crackers, bombs, explosives or fireworks inside certain portions of the city described in the ordinance.

The remains of Meyer Harris, who died last Friday in Corvallis, were buried in the Jewish cemetery near this city yesterday. A large concourse of friends from that city and here followed the remains to their last resting place.

Dr. J. W. Watts, state lecturer, has been delivering a series of lectures throughout the county under the direction of the Linn County Temperance Alliance. Since coming to the county he has secured 3000 signatures to the petitions to the next legislature.

The Teachers' Institute for the third judicial district will be held in this city next Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The leading teachers of the district, which comprises the counties of Marion, Polk, Linn, Yamhill and Tillamook. Reduced rates will be granted by the Oregon and California railroad.

Mr. E. L. Thompson and Miss Anabela P. Irvine, daughter of J. A. Irvine, one of Linn county's most substantial citizens, were united in marriage Friday evening at the residence of the bride's parents, Rev. J. W. Harris officiating. The contracting parties are among the foremost in Albany society, and many friends wish them a long and happy married life.

Mrs. Nancy Martin, mother of Mrs. Dr. Irvine, died in this city last Friday night at the advanced age of ninety years. She was born in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, December 12, 1794, was raised in Kentucky, and emigrated to Oregon in 1852, since which time she has resided in Linn county, twelve years of the time being at the house of Dr. Irvine. She has lived during the administration of every president of the United States, from Washington to the present time. The funeral will take place to-day at 10 o'clock at the Presbyterian church, and the remains will then be taken on the noon train to Halsey for burial.

Ex-United States Senator Truman Smith of Connecticut is now in his 94th year, and continues to be active in mind, though weak in body.

TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 1, 1884.

THE EAST SIDE.

STOLEN HORSE RECOVERED.

Some boys playing yesterday morning near the heavy brush adjacent to Mr Buckman's place in the vicinity of Fifteenth street and Sullivan's gulch discovered a horse hitched therein without an attendant, and becoming suspicious, some of them kept watch over the animal while others went to inform the marshal. That officer returning with them, secured the animal, and the trappings accompanying, the latter consisting of a pair of good blankets, an overcoat and a gum coat. No claimant appearing for the horse, the marshal had determined to advertise for one, when his purpose was subverted by a letter received by him by the evening mail from Sheriff Schoeps of Clackamas county, asking him to look out for a horse that had been stolen that morning from the place of J. D. Husk, near Milwaukee, the description given tallying exactly with that of the animal in his possession. A reward of $20 was also offered him for its capture. The marshal accordingly telegraphed Sheriff Schoeps that he had the horse and to come down for it in the morning. The marshal believes that if the sheriff had telegraphed him, he could also have secured the thief, as he had spotted a suspicious-looking character in town yesterday, and would have arrested him on suspicion, had he been earlier informed of the theft.

POWDER ACCIDENT.

Norman, a ten-year-old son of H. C. Myers, residing in Stephens' addition, was badly burned about the face and left hand Saturday evening by an accident with gunpowder. It appears some one had spilled about a quarter of a pound of powder in the yard, which the boy discovering proceeded to ignite, "Just for the fun of the thing." He was, however, rather careful at first in his dangerous play, standing at some distance when he threw a lighted match toward the powder. The light not taking effect immediately he naturally concluded it had fallen short of the powder and was advancing to pick it up when the powder ignited and burned him as stated. The left side of his face was blistered, his eyebrows and eyelashes on that side burned, and his hair burned in front. His left hand was also badly burned. Dr. C. H. Raffety attended him.

NOTES.

J. H. McMillan is out again, after an illness of nearly a month.

The Ladies' Relief Society meet to-day at 2 o'clock at the usual place.

Schools of district 21 met and reorganized yesterday for the new term.

Mr. Jas. Humphrey has commenced to build a two-story residence on the northeast corner of I and Seventh streets, to cost about $4000.

Rev. S. P. Wilson of the M. E. church will lecture on temperance at the Livermore schoolhouse, Stephens' addition, this (Tuesday) evening.

The time for payment of city taxes will expire on Saturday, the 5th, inclusive, this date ending the extension of time granted by the council at its last meeting.

A little Frenchman was arrested by the marshal yesterday for peddling fruit without a license. Not having the wherewithal to liquidate a fine of $5, his stock in trade was hypothecated as security and he released. The chances are he will not return, and the city officers will have a private picnic.

ONE OF WEBSTER'S STORIES.

How a Lawsuit was Won in New Hampshire.

Daniel Webster was fond of a good story, and told a few illustrating his early life in New Hampshire. One evening at a convivial party he and other distinguished lawyers were present, and the conversation happened to turn on the legal profession. "When I was a young practitioner," said Mr. Webster, "there was but one man at the New Hampshire bar of whom I was afraid, and that was old Barnaby. There were but few men who dared to enter the lists with him. On one occasion Barnaby was employed to defend a suit for a piece of land, brought by a little, crabbed, cunning lawyer called Bruce. Bruce's claim was looked upon as good as lost when it was ascertained that Barnaby was retained against him. The suit came on for trial, but Barnaby found that Bruce had worked hard, and left no stone unturned to gain the victory. The testimony for the plaintiff was very strong, and unless it could be impeached the case of the defendant was lost. The principal witness introduced by the plaintiff wore a red coat. In summing up for the defense old Barnaby commenced a furious attack on this witness, pulling his testimony all to pieces and appealing to the jury if a man who wore a red coat was, under any circumstances to be believed. 'And who is this red-coated witness, exclaimed Barnaby, "but a descendant of our common enemy, who has striven to take from us our liberty, and who would not hesitate now to deprive any poor client of his land, by making any sort of red-coated statement!' During his speech Bruce was walking up and down the bar, greatly excited and convinced that his case was gone, knowing as he did the prejudice of the jury against anything British. While, however, Barnaby was gesticulating and leaning forward to the jury in his eloquent appeal, his shirt-bosom opened slightly and Bruce accidentally discovered that Barnaby wore a red undershirt. Bruce's countenance brightened up. Putting both hands in his coat pockets he walked to the bar with great confidence, to the astonishment of his client and all lookers-on. Just as Barnaby concluded, Bruce whispered in the ear of his client, 'I've got him—your case is safe;' and, approaching the jury, he commenced his reply to the slaughtering argument of his adversary. Bruce gave a regular history of the ancestry of his red-coated witness, proving his patriotism and devotion to the country, and his character for truth and veracity. 'But what, gentlemen of jury,' broke forth Bruce, in a loud strain of eloquence, while his eye flashed fire, 'what are you to expect of a man who stands here to defend a cause based on no foundation of right or justice whatever; of a man who undertakes to destroy our testimony on the ground that my witness wears a red coat, when, gentlemen of the jury'—[here Bruce made a spring, and, catching Barnaby by the bosom of his shirt, tore it open, displaying his red flannel]—'when Mr. Barnaby himself wears a red flannel coat concealed under a blue one!' The effect was electrical. Barnaby was beaten at his own game, and Bruce gained the cause."

Our Cavalry.

Colonel A. G. Brackett in Military Review.

Usually some farmer comes riding in on horseback in his shirt sleeves, laboring under the greatest excitement, hallooing, "Indians! Indians!" and, after he has become sufficiently cooled down to tell his story, unfolds a sickening tale of the manner in which some of his relatives have been butchered in cold blood by the savages, or his horses and cows killed so as to leave him completely impoverished. Then there is hurrying to and fro in the little fort, rations have to be drawn and put up in bundles, the pack-mules saddled and loaded and then the cavalry horses themselves have to be saddled and made ready for the field. Just at nightfall, perhaps, the motley cavalcade moves out over hill and dale in search of the trail of the savages. After scouting from seven to ten days no enemy is seen, no trail discovered, and the Indians themselves have vanished like the veriest phantoms of the mountains. Not one scouting party in twenty finds Indians, the greater number of scouts rendering unsatisfactory results. Although similar, no two scouts are exactly alike, nor are they generally over the same portion of the country. Sometimes an officer stumbles on a war party of Indians, when of course there is a lively skirmish, and again, by dint of perseverance and determination, a war party of savages is overtaken and receives merited punishment for its depredations. This following the trail, day after day, is a trying ordeal for men and horses, and on these occasions they may be said to suffer real hardships. No fires are allowed to be lighted, the bacon is soon consumed, and there is little or no hard bread. This may occur in the cold and sleet of Wyoming or Montana, or on the hot and parched plains of Texas or Arizona. Men and horses must suffer, and a dear price is paid, even though a few red men are made to bite the dust. After capturing an Indian camp, enough dried meat may sometimes be found to appease the pangs of hunger, and not unfrequently horses and mules have been killed while traveling along to furnish a meat supply for the half-famished soldiers. In these days when the savages are well armed there is no small degree of danger in the skirmishes that take place with them as we all know. They are a very brave race of men when cornered, but like their civilized brethren, they take advantage of everything they can. To kill as many of the enemy as possible without loss to themselves is considered the highest type of warfare, and I am not sure they are not correct about it. They are never found throwing away their lives uselessly in war, though some of their exploits are daring in the extreme. They know they have comparatively few men, while the whites are as plentiful as the leaves on the trees. They have no train of subsistence stores to bother them, each man carrying along what he can get in the way of rations. An Indian can eat more and at the same time live on less than any other human being, their gastronomic feats at times proving perfectly astonishing.

TENNYSON'S NEW POEM.

Once more the Heavenly Power
 Makes all things new,
And domes the red-plow'd hills
 With loving blue;
The blackbirds have their wills,
 The throstles, too.

Opens a door in Heaven;
 From skies of glass
A Jacob's ladder falls
 On greening grass,
And o'er the mountain walls
 Young angels pass.

At the annual dinner of Sorosis in New York on Monday, Mrs Croly, the president, in offering the toast "The Women Martyrs," said that "the martyrdom of woman was an unspoken agony." Anything "unspeakable" must be a great agony to a woman, that's a fact.—Norristown Herald.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY, March 31.

March has passed with more than the usual amount of fair weather, there having been but twelve days in which rain fell and one of snow. Several days brought warm airs, these being overcome by coolness at other times. On the whole the weather was not too forcing and fruit trees are not unduly advanced. The absence of frost to date, with fair prospect of none of consequence in the coming month adds to the general helpfulness. Root crops in the ground are generally well advanced. Open weather gives ample opportunity for spring field work and sowing. As repeatedly stated trade has proven exceptionally good, although the produce movement was small. The present week promises well, as it opens with liberal orders. The sailing of the Alaskan steamer will call for the usual assortment. Trade with the Sound is again on the increase.

Overland receipts include 68 tubs butter, 35 cs milk, 10 cs bacon, 5 tcs 1 bbl hams, 1 ch tea, 25 kgs & cs 10 kits 1 bbl fish, 10 pkgs tobacco, 680 cs coal oil.

PRODUCE RECEIPTS—Past forty eight hours: 3,0 ctls wheat, 1753 bbls flour, 277 ctls oats, 3 ctls millstuff, 145 sks potatoes, 5030 lbs hides, 73 cs eggs, 56 bxs fruit, 3 bxs butter, 819 bbls lime. Also 2506 ctls wheat, 1050 bbls flour, 335 ctls millstuff, 890 lbs wool, 5212 lbs hides from the eastern section.

Aggregate receipts for the month of March have been 139,173 ctls wheat, 51,918 bbls flour, 9575 ctls oats, 2040 ctls barley 4297 ctls bran, 3852 ctls millstuff, 3766 sks potatoes, 1,65 bls hay, 20,706 lbs wool, 308,860 lbs hides, 81 pkgs butter, 1980 cs eggs, 1031 bxs fruit, 3263 bbls lime, 2601 sks flaxseed, 21,149 lbs hops.

Aggregate receipts by leading lines of transportation since August 1 last have been: 2,559,310 ctls wheat, 387 723 bbls flour, 75,581 ctls oats, 5520 ctls barley, 37,376 ctls bran, 35,604 ctls millstuff, 18,533 sks potatoes, 11 003 tns hay, 2,035,822 lbs wool, 916,879 lbs hides, 2266 pkgs butter, 8800 cs eggs, 26,155 bxs fruit, 26,427 bbls lime, 14,171 sks flaxseed, 1,718,634 lbs hops.

FREIGHTS—Fair sized from accepted 30s for orders from San Francisco, on a weak and dull market. The demand for tonnage along the coast appears to have quite ceased for the time. Depressed grain markets act as a bar to business. The week will see our present loading fleet down the river. New business is possible, but hardly deemed probable.

WHEAT—Beerbohm quotes cargoes generally the sixpence less, California for shipment alone maintaining its last week's value. At the decline all markets are very quiet. Other markets are weak. With us the feeling is one of weakness, and the limited trading adds to this feeling. Operators expect lower values and buy closely.

FLOUR—A good demand is had from the outside.

OATS—Stocks somewhat reduced by a large purchase to go to Yaquina. The market shows no improvement, 45@50c being quoted for good to choice feed.

ONIONS—Rather firmer as stocks of local are reduced. Dealers pay $1 25 for good.

DRIED FRUIT—We quote: Sun dried apples, sacks 9@10c; Plummer dried in boxes, 15@16c; eastern in barrels, 10c; pears, 15c; pitless plums, machine, in boxes, 16c; sun dried pitless plums, 18@15c; peaches, 13@14c; Oregon prunes, 12c; eastern and German do, 8@8½c; figs, 9c; raisins $1 75 @2, with usual advance for fractions.

CHICKENS—Stocks ample and values quoted irregular at $3@6 50 as extreme.

EGGS—Good movement at 20 cents.

HAY—Market weaker, with baled timothy offered at $18 on wharf. The supply is apparently more than equal to requirements before the new crop comes in.

SHIPPING NOTES.

Steamer Columbia sails to-night.

With the sailing of the State of California from San Francisco next Friday the four day schedule goes into effect.

Captain Chivers of the British ship Nebo, now at San Francisco, is in the city. The libel against the ship comes up soon in the United States court.

British bark Alpheta cleared from London Saturday.

It is stated on authority that the Alaskan comes to this port, although it is not definitely settled that she will remain. Complaint is so loud as to the present running time of boats on the lower river, it is thought the company will retain her here. The mail boat, leaving here at 6 A. M., seldom reaches Astoria before 4:30 P. M., and now that the fishing season is at hand the time will be later. Ten or more hours is too long for a run of 110 miles, and merchants having business with one or the other points demand that the time be shortened. Other than the regular trade, there is the summer travel, which in most part goes to the fastest boats. The mail service would doubtless increase the pay for shorter time if efforts were made to have it done, and some move should be made by the time of letting next contracts.

Steamer Idaho is discharging coal at Tongue point. She leaves up to-morrow.

The new steamer Santa Rosa reached Valparaiso last Saturday in a good run of 45 days from Sandy Hook. At this rate she will lower the passage record out.

Schooner General Banning reached San Francisco to-day, 3 days from Astoria.
